"It's was been a good first day, we did not think we would have had all this attention." Marco Ferretti and Paul Gaspari are met, holders members of the new car rental service with driver and radiotaxi "Emilio" that since yesterday is active in our city.

Emilio was born with the idea to present itself as an alternative to the taxi service, with which it shares the same function so that you can define a private taxi service, but with two significant differences: not only can you book in advance the service, but there ' it is also the preventive certainty of costs. The fixed cost of the ride and the chance to book passage are the workhorse of Emilio, the element on which the two partners aim a lot, and also generated some controversy with the taxi drivers. But Ferretti and Gaspari said they are not interested in the controversy: "We are interested in just giving a service to the city and then we're not even taking into account the controversies or respond to them - concluded the two - We are interested to grow an adequate service to the city and to the customer's expectations. "
